Ancient Resonance:
Chinese Seals and Calligraphy by Liang Xuan Feng

artcommune gallery is pleased to present Ancient Resonance, an exhibition that showcases a selection of carved seals and calligraphy by young Chinese seal carving artist, Liang Xuan Feng. Apart from the refined collection of Chinese seals on display, the exhibition also presents a rare opportunity for Chinese art enthusiasts to acquire customised seals specially engraved by the artist.

Born in 1976 in Bao Qing, China, Liang Xuan Feng majored in Chinese Calligraphy at the Capital Normal University and was a student of famous Chinese calligrapher, Mr. Zhai Mo. Also a self-taught seal carving artist since 2005, Liang's accomplished techniques and intricate calligraphic designs have captured attention in the Chinese market in recent years and the demand for his carved seals has been on the rise in China.

An ancient art form that combines calligraphy and refined engraving skills, Chinese seal carving focuses on four aspects: the stone, the ornamentation of the surface, the calligraphic style of the text, and the carving design. For the text engraving, the Chinese script is either incised into the seal's surface, leaving the stamped legend as white lines on a red background (also known as 白文: bai wen), or the script is left in relief with the background cut away, resulting in a red text (also known as 朱文: zhu wen).

Liang is adept at engraving in both bai wen and zhu wen, and his seal carvings have received critical praise for their refined and elegant calligraphic styles. For this exhibition, the artist has specially travelled to Singapore with a number of quality shou shan stones to be used for customised seal carving designs.
